ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Many people have assisted me in a number of ways during the time I have been working on this thesis. Firstly I would like to thank my supervisor Dr Donovan Storey for his assistance, support and occasional wit throughout the year. Advice and assistance from Dr Glyn Harper was also much appreciated.

I am also greatly appreciative of the assistance extended to me by the NZDF both in terms of access to information and in more practical ways during the period of fieldwork. Without this the task of writing this thesis would have been considerably more difficult. I would also like to thank all those that participated in interviews and gave generously of their time, knowledge and experience. I would also like to express my thanks to Massey University for their generous support by way of a Masterate Scholarship, without which this thesis may not have been possible.

Finally I would like to express my thanks to my wife Maggie, and my children Imogen and Alexander for all their patience and understanding during the time I have been working on this thesis. I couldn't have done it without all your support.
