Copyright is owned by the Author of the thesis. Permission is given for a copy to be downloaded by an individual for the purpose of research and private study only. The thesis may not be reproduced elsewhere without the permission of the Author.
Attachment Type and Cognitive Status of People in Treatment For Substance Use and Abuse

A thesis presented in partial fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of Master of Arts at Massey University, Palmerston North, New Zealand.

Lesley Barbara Murch
2002
Abstract

This study demonstrates the importance of examining attachment issues, and the cognitive status of people in treatment for substance abuse. The participants were seven clients aged between 20 and 45 years of age, in treatment for substance abuse, and six of their counsellors. The Adult Attachment Interview (AAI: George, Kaplan & Main, 1996) was used as a therapeutic tool to uncover forgotten trauma and unresolved grief. Each of these participants was interviewed and portions of the transcripts are used to demonstrate the effectiveness of the instrument in use. These findings give examples of the richness of the client AAI transcripts which are then used in the counselling process. The second measure used was Loevinger's SentenceCompletion Test (1976,1998) which was thought to show promise for indicating where people are 'stuck' in their thinking. In this study rather than being 'stuck' in an immature way of thinking,participants show evidence of mature thinking. Classification of the AAI gave support to findings in attachment research that reflect a substantial and enduring connection between attachment organisation and psychopathology, and was linked to a wide array of indices of psychosocial functioning. Intergenerational transmission of severe insecure attachment behaviours was evident with all clients, as expected, which suggests that further investigation of the use of the AAI in therapy is important.
Acknowledgements

Thank you to my supervisors, Sue Watson and Dr Robert Gregory, for their support, guidance, wisdom and patience during this project.

Thank you to ALAC for the Masters scholarship which gave extra impetus to this project.

A special thank you to my fellow travellers on the road to recovery from unhealthy addictions, your support and belief in me will always be remembered and acknowledged.

A special thank you to my family and friends who have supported and encouraged me when I needed it, and were always there to listen. Much aroha to whanau in Taranaki, especially from Parihaka and Puketapu.

I acknowledge the assistance of the Massey University Human Ethics Committee, and the Manawatu-Whanganui Ethics Committee for ethical reviews of the research proposal.

I acknowledge the grant awarded to me from the Massey University 2001 Graduate Research Fund.

Now I would like to express my heartfelt gratitude to all those who were a part of this project, to the clients who were willing to step into and share their pain, and to the counsellors who could see the merit of working with their clients in this manner, for the hours that we spent together, and above all else, for the wonderful healing and understanding that came about for all of us during these interactions.

And last but not least, much love and thanks to Alex and Jack for their company, love and understanding.
Table of Contents

Chapter 1: Introduction

Chapter 2: Literature Review

- Substance Use and Abuse .......................................................... 4
- Attachment ................................................................................. 7
- Ego Development ....................................................................... 11
- Comorbidity................................................................................ 13
- Summary...................................................................................... 14
- Implications for treatment and therapy ..................................... 15
- Research questions....................................................................... 21

Chapter 3: Method

- Aims .......................................................................................... 22
- Instruments ................................................................................ 22
- The Adult Attachment Interview ............................................. 22
- Washington University Sentence Completion
  Test............................................................................................... 23
- Ethical Considerations ................................................................ 24
- Procedure .................................................................................. 24
- Method of analysis .................................................................... 24
- Recruiting Participants ............................................................. 25
- Sample ....................................................................................... 25
- Informed consent ....................................................................... 25
- Handling and storage of material ............................................. 26
Chapter 4: Results........................................................................................................ 27

Brief description of the seven clients........................................................................ 27
Jenny......................................................................................................................... 27
Alison....................................................................................................................... 28
Rebecca................................................................................................................. 29
Jane......................................................................................................................... 29
Michael............................................................................................................... 30
Josie....................................................................................................................... 31
John....................................................................................................................... 32
Content analysis of AAI transcripts........................................................................ 33
Table 1............................................................................................................... 35

Research Questions
1. Are there experiences of loss, abuse and abandonment in the lives of substance abuse clients?............................................................. 39
2. What is the state of mind regarding attachment of these clients?.............................. 40
3. What is the attachment type of each client?.......................................................... 41
4. Does the client’s attachment type relate to theoretical descriptions, and attachment explanations?.............................................................. 42
5. What is the ego level development of each client?............................................... 45
6. How does the content area of responses to the AAI and the SCT assist the counsellor to understand the issues and areas of concern, underlying the substance abuse of each client?............................................................ 47
7. Do counsellors perceive the information to be useful to their clients in their recovery process?............................................................. 50
8. What are the implications of attachment for therapy with substance abuse?............................ 53
9. How does attachment theory relate to existing practices?.............................................. 55
Summary............................................................................................................................. 60
Postscript............................................................................................................................ 60

Chapter 5: Discussion............................................................................................................. 62

1. Experience of loss, abuse and abandonment.................................................. 62
2. Childhood attachment..................................................................................... 63
3. Attachment type.................................................................................................. 63
4. Attachment type, theoretical descriptions, and attachment explanations................................................................................. 64
5. Ego development level....................................................................................... 64
6. Counsellors' understanding of the AAI and SCT........................................ 66
7. Counsellors' perceptions.................................................................................. 66
8. Implications of attachment for therapy......................................................... 68
9. Attachment theory in practice...................................................................... 69
Emerging themes.............................................................................................................. 69
Limitations of this study............................................................................................... 71
Strengths of this study................................................................................................. 72
Suggestions for future research.................................................................................. 72
Conclusion....................................................................................................................... 74

References......................................................................................................................... 75

Appendices

One - Clients' Information Sheet .................................................................................. 84
List of Tables

1  Content analysis of AAI transcripts.......................................................... 35
2  Example of SCT scores and answers........................................................... 46