Copyright is owned by the Author of the thesis. Permission is given for a copy to be downloaded by an individual for the purpose of research and private study only. The thesis may not be reproduced elsewhere without the permission of the Author.
MEN AGAINST VIOLENCE: A POST-STRUCTURALIST CRITIQUE OF THE SCIENCE AND PRACTICE OF STOPPING MEN'S VIOLENCE TO WOMEN IN AN APPLIED COMMUNITY SETTING

A thesis presented in partial fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in Psychology at Massey University

Damian O’Neill
1997
ABSTRACT

This research project begins with a post-structuralist critique of the social science theoretical literature surrounding wife abuse. Within this most controversial area of the social sciences five discourses were found to be operating in and informing the field, between them affording a diverse array of theoretical accounts and intervention strategies. These underlying discursive resources are the Liberal humanist ‘instrumental’ position, the Romantic ‘expressive tension’ position, Tabula rasa ‘learning’ theory, Medical ‘pathology’ and the Structuralist ‘social systemic’ account. The history and implications of each discourse are discussed.

In a second study a participant observation strategy explored how the Manawatu Men Against Violence collective (MMAV), in the face of this diverse and conflicting field, work to stop men’s violence in the community. Through participating in a MMAV ‘Stopping Violence’ programme, observations concerning the discursive content and structure to the programme were made. It was found through this exercise that MMAV employed four of the five discourses identified in the scientific literature and omitted one; ‘pathology’. This was a strategic move on MMAV’s part, enabling a variety of intervention strategies, dominated by a Liberal humanist construction of events, around which the remaining discourses were couched. The implications of this discursive structure to the programme are discussed.

A third study explored how the MMAV programme impacts upon participant’s subjectivity. Semi-structured interviews prior to and following participation in a MMAV Stopping Violence programme recorded narratives of the men as they accounted for their violence, the violence of others in the community and described their intimate relationships. It was found that exposure to the discourses imparted by MMAV had had an impact upon the men’s accounting practices as distinct shifts as well as consistencies in subject positionings were apparent in the post-course interview comparison. Results demonstrated that the men had interacted with the course material and that this had several effects upon their sense of agency. The implications of such shifts and continuities are discussed and recommendations for future research are made.
I would like to take this moment to acknowledge and thank the people who have helped me bring this research to fruition. Thankyou to my friends for their encouragement and interest. I'd also like to thank my parents and family for their ongoing support and confidence in me. Kia-ora to Jack, Emeraldo, Samuel and Kirsten for your inspiration.

A warm thanks goes out also to the participants of this study, the men whose sharing of their stories made this exploration possible. To the men at the Men Against Violence collective, especially Toni, Phil and Phil, for your support, encouragement and practical help. Thank you.

I hope this research is of value to you.

I'd also like to thank the psychology department office staff, Heather, Robyn and Melanie, for their consistent patience and help with the practical problems emerging from time to time. Harvey Jones too has been invaluable in this respect particularly with reference to computing. I'd like to thank Michael Donnelly also for his administrative efforts and the Massey University Library staff for their cooperation and assistance.

Last but not least, a big thankyou to Mandy Morgan, my thesis supervisor, whose wisdom and nice constructive support I greatly appreciate. Thanks also to Keith for his encouragement, Erin for his coffee and Leigh for her sense of humour(s).
TABLE OF CONTENTS

Abstract ........................................................................................................................................ ii
Acknowledgements .................................................................................................................... iii
List of Figures ............................................................................................................................. vii

INTRODUCTION

Chapter One: The Problem of Men’s Violence to Women .......................................................... 1
Chapter Two: The Present Study ................................................................................................ 12
  Objectives .................................................................................................................................. 14
  Post-structuralism ..................................................................................................................... 15
  Reflexivity .................................................................................................................................. 21
  The Manawatu Men Against Violence Collective .................................................................... 27
  Ethical Issues ............................................................................................................................ 29

METHOD

Chapter Three: Methodology .................................................................................................... 31
  Discourse analysis .................................................................................................................... 31
  Study one .................................................................................................................................. 36
  Study two .................................................................................................................................. 37
  Study three ................................................................................................................................ 42

STUDY ONE: A POST-STRUCTURALIST READING OF THE THEORETICAL LITERATURE SURROUNDING WIFE ABUSE

Chapter Four: The Theoretical Literature Surrounding Wife Abuse ........................................... 50
  Discourses in the field ............................................................................................................... 52
  Discourse (a): Pathology ........................................................................................................ 52
  Discourse (b): Inner tension ..................................................................................................... 60
  Discourse (c): Instrumental power .......................................................................................... 66
  Discourse (d): Social system .................................................................................................... 75
  Discourse (e): Learned behaviour ........................................................................................... 84
STUDY TWO: A PARTICIPANT OBSERVATION OF THE MMAV STOPPING VIOLENCE PROGRAMME

Chapter Five: Introductory Sessions. ........................................ 94
  Session one: Introductions ............................................... 94
  Session two: The sharing of biographical stories ...................... 109

Chapter Six: The Middle Phase. ........................................... 122
  Session three: Defining violence and anger .......................... 122
  Session four: Checking in and identifying violence .................. 129
  Session five: Rating scales .............................................. 135
  Session six: Time out and safety plans .................................. 141

Chapter Seven: The Ending Phase. ....................................... 151
  Session seven: Resistance to responsibility .......................... 151
  Session eight: Communication and expression ......................... 159
  Session nine: Last night .................................................. 167

Chapter Eight: Discussion of the MMAV Programme .................. 172
  Course summary .......................................................... 172
  Discourses informing the MMAV programme ............................ 175
  Discourse dynamics within the course structure ...................... 182
  Reflexivity ............................................................... 189

STUDY THREE: A POST-STRUCTURALIST COMPARISON OF VIOLENT MEN’S PRE AND POST PROGRAMME TALK

Chapter Nine: The Mens’s Pre-Programme Stories. ................. 193
  Introduction .............................................................. 193
  Section (a): The men’s accounts of their violence to their partners. 195
  Section (b): The men’s accounts of ‘family violence’ as a community problem ... 206
  Section (c): The men’s accounts of gender structures in their relationships. 214
Chapter Ten: Pre-Course Discursive resources .......................... 221
  Section (a): The men’s accounts of their violence to their partners. 221
  Section (b): Accounts of ‘family violence’ as a community problem 226
  Section (c): Gender structures in the men’s relationship talk. 232
  Summaries of the pre-course analysis. 235

Chapter Eleven: The Men’s Post-Programme Stories ................ 238
  Section (a): Feedback on the MMAV Stopping Violence programme. 238
  Section (b): Accounts of ‘family violence’ as a community problem. 248
  Section (c): The men’s accounts of their violence to their partners. 260
  Section (d): Gender structures in the men’s relationship talk. 271

Chapter Twelve: Post-Course Discursive Resources ..................... 280
  Section (a): Feedback on the MMAV Stopping Violence programme. 280
  Section (b): Accounts of ‘family violence’ as a community problem. 283
  Section (c): The men’s accounts of their violence to their partners. 288
  Section (d): Gender structures in the men’s relationship talk. 291
  Summaries of the post-course analysis. 294

Chapter Thirteen: A Post-Structuralist Commentary on the Men’s Pre and Post Programme Talk. ....................... 300
  Recap: Where we are and where we have come from. .......... 300
  Shifts, slippings and continuities .......................... 303
  Summary and conclusions. .................................. 313
  Reflexivity. .............................................. 324

CONCLUSION

Chapter Fourteen: Conclusion ........................................ 330

References ....................................................... 339
Appendices ....................................................... 374
LIST OF FIGURES

Figure 5.1: Power and Control Wheel ........................................ 97
Figure 5.2: Equality Wheel .................................................. 98
Figure 5.3: Tension Graph .................................................. 116
Figure 6.1: Anger Time Graph for Unpacking Violence .................. 136
Figure 6.2: A Time Out Contract .......................................... 149
Figure 7.1: The Cycle of Violence graph ................................ 160
Figure 7.2: The Personalised Cycle of Violence ......................... 162