Guardians of the state or the regime? Examining the behaviour of the Egyptian military during the 2011 uprising.

A thesis presented in fulfilment of the requirements of the degree of

Master of Arts in Politics

Massey University, Manawatu,

New Zealand

Nadia Yousef

2012
Abstract

The Arab military has long been a key player within the institutions of the state, particularly in Egypt. It was no surprise then that when the Arab Spring took hold in Cairo in January 2011 and President Hosni Mubarak was overthrown, that the military stepped in to fill the power vacuum. This thesis investigates the role of the Egyptian military in the 2011 uprising. To understand how this situation eventuated, it provides an in depth analysis of the role of the military in the Egyptian state since 1952 when Egypt first became a republic. It explores the deep roots that the military has set throughout the institutions of the state under the guidance of three authoritarian Presidents. By examining the modern institutional history of the Egyptian military, it provides tools for understanding why it is now behaving in the way it is. Primarily this is based on its attempts to either remain in power, or entrench itself further in Egyptian politics so that it is able to maintain its position of privilege once a democratically elected President comes to power.

Key words: Arab Spring, SCAF, Egypt, Military, New Institutionalism, Sultanistic regime, Non-democratic civil-military relations, Mubarak, Freedom and Justice Party, Muslim Brotherhood.
Acknowledgements

This thesis has been helped along with the support of several people that I must thank.

My supervisors Dr. Matthew Henry and Dr. Nigel Parsons; your help, guidance, and support throughout this process, as well as all of my prior projects has been much appreciated. You have both taught me a lot and kept me motivated and interested in contemporary Middle Eastern politics.

My wonderful husband Ross Wakefield and my parents Essam and Susan Yousef have been beacons of support throughout my six years at university. Your proof-reading, encouragement, and bribery to get me working when I lost motivation was incredible and I appreciate it no end.

Thank you also to my friends Jessica Bignell and Alec McIntosh who took the time to proof-read, fact-check and share ideas about this project. Your effort and contribution helped me significantly in this journey.

Thank you all, without you this would not have been possible.
Contents

Chapter 1: Introduction

- 1.1 Note on definitions ................................................................. 7
- 1.2 Thesis structure ................................................................. 9

Chapter 2: Conceptual Framework

- 2.1 The State ................................................................................. 12
  - 2.1.1 The capitalist theory of the state ........................................... 16
  - 2.1.2 Sultanistic regimes ......................................................... 17
  - 2.1.3 The state and the monopoly of violence ......................... 20
- 2.3 The Military ............................................................................. 21
- 2.4 Civil-Military relations .......................................................... 25
- 2.5 New Institutionalism ............................................................ 33
- 2.6 Conclusion ............................................................................. 40

Chapter 3: Methodology

.................................................................................................................. 43

Chapter 4: Egypt from the Monarchy to Mubarak

- 4.1 The 1952 Free Officers Movement and end of Egypt’s monarchy ........................................ 48
- 4.2 Nasser and the beginnings of the authoritarian military-based Egyptian regimes ................. 49
  - 4.2.1 The 1956 Suez nationalisation and ensuing crisis ....................... 51
  - 4.2.2 Nasser and the socialist era ............................................... 52
  - 4.2.3 The Six-Day war with Israel .............................................. 53
- 4.3 The Sadat era .......................................................................... 54
  - 4.3.1 Egypt’s economic restructuring under Sadat – the infitah policies ..................... 57
  - 4.3.2 Egypt’s era of financial aid from the United States .................. 59
- 4.4 Hosni Mubarak’s reign .......................................................... 60
Table of Figures:

Figure 1: The structure of the Egyptian military, p. 63.

Figure 2: The results of the 2011/2012 Egyptian Parliamentary elections, p. 97.