Copyright is owned by the Author of the thesis. Permission is given for a copy to be downloaded by an individual for the purpose of research and private study only. The thesis may not be reproduced elsewhere without the permission of the Author.
Becoming a school child: The role of peers in supporting new entrant transitions

A thesis presented in partial fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of Master of Education (Early Years) at Massey University, Palmerston North, New Zealand

Joanne Maraea Hayes

2013
Abstract

When children start school they are faced with the task of learning how to fit into the new environment and how to learn in new ways. The ease with which children transition to school is a factor in later academic and social success. It is therefore important that educators understand the ways successful transition experiences can be facilitated and supported. Literature describes the role of teachers in supporting transition experiences for children and the ways in which family can support children during this time. However, although research identifies a link between social skills, friendships and transition experiences, few studies have explored the role that peers play in helping new entrants learn what to do and how to learn at school. This qualitative research project aimed to address this gap and explored the role more experienced school children play in supporting the transition process for new entrants in the New Zealand context. The objectives were to identify: the ways in which more experienced peers support new entrants during their transition to school; the strategies new entrants use to learn from their peers; and the ways teachers can facilitate this learning process.

A case study approach was used to examine the experiences of three children in three different schools during their early days at school. The use of classroom observations and interviews with teachers and case study children provided a range of data from different perspectives which were then thematically analysed to inform the findings. Findings presented describe the process of “intent participation” (Rogoff et al., 2003, p. 175) occurring as the new entrants moved from watching and listening to their peers to participating fully in classroom experiences. Their more experienced peers supported this process in a range of ways. Aspects of the classroom organisation and each teacher’s pedagogical practices which affected peer learning for the new entrants will be discussed and implications for educators will be explored. The findings highlight how specific contexts can influence the opportunities that arise for peer learning.
Acknowledgements

Grateful thanks to my supervisors, Professor Claire McLachlan and Dr Alison Sewell. The time spent reading countless drafts of work and providing constructive feedback was much appreciated and greatly contributed to the completion of this research project. I have learned a lot from your wise words over the past two years.

I must also acknowledge the teachers and children who participated in this research. Without you I would have been unable to undertake this research. It was a privilege to spend time in the classrooms with you and I really enjoyed my time in each classroom.

Thanks to my colleagues for the support you have given me and the encouragement which has helped me persist, to Sally who helped me draw my model. Also to my friends and wider family for freeing me up from child care responsibilities on a regular basis so this project could have periods of undivided attention.

To my husband and children, this thesis belongs, in part, to you as I could not have completed it without the thoughtfulness and support of you all. Stephen, thank you for taking the children out (even when it was raining) and thank you for believing in me. Ryan, Shannon and Megan thank you for respecting the closed door, making me cups of tea and keeping me smiling.
Table of Contents

Title page................................................................................................................................. i
Abstract.................................................................................................................................. ii
Acknowledgements............................................................................................................... iii
Table of Contents.................................................................................................................. iv
List of illustrations................................................................................................................ vii

Chapter 1: Introduction
Rationale for the present study ............................................................................................. 1
Aims and objectives of the present study.............................................................................. 3
Structure of this thesis ........................................................................................................... 4

Chapter 2: Literature Review
Introduction ........................................................................................................................... 6
Theoretical perspectives ........................................................................................................ 7
Transition and development ................................................................................................. 10
Transition and culture ........................................................................................................... 11
  Continuities and discontinuities ................................................................................ 14
  Children’s perspectives of the change in culture when starting school.................... 15
  Teachers’ perceptions of the change in culture from ECE to school........................ 17
Supporting transitions.......................................................................................................... 21
  The role of teachers and families .............................................................................. 21
  The role of peers ........................................................................................................ 23
Peer learning ........................................................................................................................ 26
Summary .............................................................................................................................. 30

Chapter 3: Methodology
Introduction ......................................................................................................................... 32
Research question and objectives ....................................................................................... 33
Method ................................................................................................................................ 33
  Case studies .................................................................................................................. 33
Data collection methods ...................................................................................................... 34
  Observations .............................................................................................................. 34
  Interviews .................................................................................................................. 36
  Children’s drawings ................................................................................................... 37
Data analysis ........................................................................................................................ 38
Ethical considerations .......................................................................................................... 39
Participants and settings...................................................................................................... 41
  Case study 1: Eve and Mrs Austin.............................................................................. 42
  Case study 2: John and Mrs Harding ...... 42
  Case study 3: Rob and Mrs Worden .......................................................................... 43
Summary .............................................................................................................................. 44

Chapter 4: Case study one: Eve and Mrs Austin
Introduction ......................................................................................................................... 45
Strategies new entrants use to learn from their peers........................................................ 45
New entrant strategy: Learning by observing peers ................................................................. 45
Strategies experienced peers use to help new entrants learn what to do at school .............. 48
  Peer strategy: Telling ........................................................................................................... 49
  Peer strategy: Showing or modelling .................................................................................. 51
  Peer strategy: Scaffolding academic learning ................................................................. 52
  Peer strategy: Supporting participation ............................................................................. 53
  Peer strategy: Doing things for the new entrant ............................................................... 54
  Peer strategy: Giving encouragement and positive affirmation ......................................... 55
Strategies teachers use to support peer learning about what to do at school ...................... 55
  Teacher strategy: Providing opportunities for children to work together .......................... 56
  Teacher strategy: Selecting groups and buddies ............................................................... 57
  Teacher strategy: Telling experienced children how to help ............................................. 58
  Teacher strategy: Using experienced children as a model ................................................. 59
  Teacher strategy: Affirming children who help the new entrant ....................................... 61
Summary .................................................................................................................................. 61

Chapter 5: Case study two: John and Mrs Harding
Introduction ............................................................................................................................... 63
Strategies new entrants use to learn from their peers ........................................................... 63
  New entrant strategy: Learning by observing peers ............................................................ 64
Strategies experienced peers use to help new entrants learn what to do at school .......... 66
  Peer strategy: Telling ........................................................................................................... 66
Strategies teachers use to support peer learning about what to do at school ...................... 67
  Teacher strategy: Providing opportunities for children to work together .......................... 67
  Teacher strategy: Selecting groups and buddies ............................................................... 69
  Teacher strategy: Telling experienced children how to help ............................................. 69
  Teacher strategy: Using experienced children as a model ................................................. 70
  Teacher strategy: Establishing classroom routines ......................................................... 71
  Teacher strategy: Affirming children who help the new entrant ....................................... 72
Additional aspects of peer learning ....................................................................................... 73
  Ako .................................................................................................................................... 73
  New entrant becoming a tuakana ...................................................................................... 74
Summary .................................................................................................................................. 74

Chapter 6: Case study three: Rob and Mrs Worden
Introduction ............................................................................................................................... 76
Strategies new entrants use to learn from their peers ........................................................... 76
  New entrant strategy: Learning by observing peers ............................................................ 77
Strategies experienced peers use to help new entrants learn what to do at school ........ 80
  Peer strategy: Telling ........................................................................................................... 81
  Peer strategy: Showing or modelling .................................................................................. 82
  Peer strategy: Scaffolding academic learning ................................................................. 83
  Peer strategy: Supporting participation ............................................................................. 83
  Peer strategy: Doing things for the new entrant ............................................................... 84
Strategies teachers use to support peer learning about what to do at school ...................... 84
  Teacher strategy: Providing opportunities for children to work together .......................... 85
  Teacher strategy: Selecting groups and buddies ............................................................... 87
List of illustrations

Model of peer learning in the new entrant classroom .................................................................97