Copyright is owned by the Author of the thesis. Permission is given for a copy to be downloaded by an individual for the purpose of research and private study only. The thesis may not be reproduced elsewhere without the permission of the Author.
SUPPORT FOR MOTHERS BY EARLY CHILDHOOD CENTRES: A QUALITATIVE STUDY

A thesis presented in partial fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in Education at

Massey University
Palmerston North
New Zealand

Avril Janis Thesing Winks
2006
ABSTRACT

Mothers have been involved with early childhood centres since their inception. Apart from obvious benefits for their children this liaison has also been important for mothers through gains in parenting knowledge, increased confidence and personal wellbeing. The present study argues that this is pertinent to appropriate and focused support being crucial for mothers at the life stage of adjustment to early parenting when disruption of networks has occurred. As well, it reflects the responsibility of institutions such as early childhood centres to fulfil these needs in a society where traditional support has fragmented.

The study was designed to explore ways in which support mechanisms operated in four different early childhood services, through the medium of interviews. The unique findings in the study culminated in six propositions that showed support to be a product of mothers’ own activity in building relationships and contributing to their centre community. At the same time irrespective of service type all centres operated upon the basis of both formal and informal systems of support. Consequently, whilst mothers’ activities were most favoured by socially co-operative environments, they were opportunists in both systems. However, of major concern was that the informal systems were the most effective, as the statement of Desirable Objectives and Practices (Ministry of Education, 1996) exhorts staff to consider parent interactions as partnerships and The Strategic Plan for Early Childhood Education (Ministry of Education, 2002) has a vision of socially co-operative practices. Teachers rather than being unwilling to establish more collaborative styles of leadership were hampered by a lack of confidence in working with parents. Difficulties were the consequence of professional attitudes to trained knowledge, unmodified by the benefits of training to facilitate adults. Addressing these issues will not only help teachers to develop more collaborative systems that will facilitate support for mothers, but it will also ensure partnerships that make better use of their services to the mutual benefit of early childhood centre communities.
Dedication:

To my parents who through traumatic and changing times gave me my first experiences in the art of parenting helping to make me what I was before I became what I am.

To mothers everywhere.

Acknowledgements

This study is about support, and the value of social networks. In the same way this study itself has only been brought to completion through the contribution of many people. Whether their help has been momentary or sustained it has been a necessary part of the endeavour. I acknowledge particularly my supervisors Professor Joy Cullen (Massey University) and Dr. Judith Loveridge (formerly of Massey, now of Victoria University) for their guidance, support and expertise in helping me to bring the project to its conclusion. As well my thanks go to all the mothers and teachers who participated by giving substance to the study through their time and insights. At the same time my grateful thanks go to my dear husband Jan Thesing and my family for their support and tolerance during my frequent absences from family life. I extend my thanks and appreciation to colleagues, friends, inspirers and all those who have provided practical help without whom there would have been intolerable gaps.

Jan Thesing
Sefton, Lisa, Lauren and Toby Thesing
Kinsa, Paul, Grant and Mark Dawson
Zarina, Paul and Karissa Couper
Dr. Michael Kingham
Dr. Barton McArthur
Dr. Andrea Boyd
Dr. Patricia O'Brien
Kathleen Martindale
Joy Oehlers
Jan Rhodes
Dr. Margaret Turnbull
Helen Hedges
Christine Sorrell
Massey University, College of Education, Palmerston North
University of Auckland, Faculty of Education.
TABLE OF CONTENTS

Abstract ......................................................................................................................ii
Dedication and Acknowledgements..........................................................................iii
Table of Contents ......................................................................................................iv
List of Appendices ....................................................................................................xi
List of Tables ...........................................................................................................xii
List of Figures .........................................................................................................xiii
Glossary ..................................................................................................................xiv

CHAPTER 1: Introduction

1.1 Background to the study ................................................................. 1
1.1.2 Everyday social exchange as the basis of mothers’ support .......... 2
1.1.3 Gaining incremental knowledge as an important aspect of support .... 3
1.2 The early childhood context in New Zealand ......................... 4
1.3 Support as a rationale for the study ........................................ 5
1.3.1 Family support enshrined in legislation ................................ 9
1.4 The methodological approach .............................................. 10
1.5 Organisation of the research report .................................... 11

CHAPTER 2: Literature review

2.1 Parameters of the literature search ........................................ 12
2.2 Historical perspectives: the development of early childhood services and family involvement .............................................. 13
2.2.1 Early definitions of parent support and education .......... 13
2.2.2 Landmarks in provision and the development of social policy towards a unity model of early childhood services .......... 14
2.2.3 Development of Te Whaariki, The Early Childhood Curriculum and decentralised policies involving local communities in centre management ........................ 16
2.3 The diversity of New Zealand early childhood services .......... 18
2.4 The wider parent education movement as a development of early intervention

2.4.1 Parents as First Teachers Programme in New Zealand

2.4.2 Supporting families by targeting naturally occurring networks

2.4.3 Support through multi-agency and co-ordinated children’s services

2.4.4 New Zealand family support initiatives

2.5 Summary

2.6 The principles of support delivery and coping mechanisms

2.6.1 Life stress and ways of coping

2.6.2 Motherhood as a stressful life-stage

2.7 Summary

2.8 Relationships as catalysts of support

2.8.1 Relationships and different dimensions of support

2.8.2 Support through diverse relationships

2.9 The development of early childhood community enhancement initiatives

2.9.1 Support through successful community programme initiatives

2.9.2 A New Zealand community support initiative

2.10 Summary

2.11 Early childhood teachers’ attitudes towards supporting mothers

2.11.1 Support as isolated packages of parent education

2.12 Mothers’ perceptions’ of support

2.12.1 Support as a process of social exchange

2.12.2 Support as an active response

2.13 Summary

2.14 Conclusion

CHAPTER 3: Methodology and Procedures

3.1 Introduction: the purpose of the study

3.2 Selection of an appropriate methodology

3.2.1 Selection of a qualitative methodological
CHAPTER 4: Results

4.1 Introduction to the results chapters: research questions 1-3 ......................90

4.2 Research question 1: To what degree do mothers believe they need and gain personal support as a result of being members of an early childhood centre? ................................................................. 91

4.2.1 Relationship building as mothers’ primary support goal..........................92

4.2.2 Gaining confidence prior to contribution...............................................96

4.2.3 Child adjustment as a first focus for mothers.........................................98

4.2.4 Maternal variables and support outcomes ...........................................99

4.2.5 Mothers’ contribution and centre purposes .........................................100

4.2.6 Summary ..............................................................................................106

4.3 Research question 2: What according to first time mothers is the nature of effective support? .................................................................108
4.3.1 The difficult and lengthy process of centre relationship building ..........110
4.3.2 Centre selection as a consequence of first relationships with staff ..........112
4.3.3 Relationships with teachers and professional support.............................113
4.3.4 Contextual support through informal exchanges with teachers ...............116
4.3.5 Peer relationships and intimate support ..................................................118
4.3.6 The range of potential relationships in early childhood networks ............122
4.3.7 Centre responses to relationship building ..............................................123
4.3.8 Summary ..................................................................................................128

4.4 Research question 3: Can it be inferred that any support received by mothers from centres is responsive to their changing needs over time? .......130
4.4.1 Group relationships as support for changing needs ................................131
4.4.2 Increased confidence and greater responsibility ......................................133
4.4.3 Summary ..................................................................................................135

4.5 Chapter summary .......................................................................................135

CHAPTER 5: Results
5.1 Introduction to results chapter five: research questions 4-6 ....................137
5.2 Research question 4: To what extent do the staff believe they have a role in supporting mothers who attend early childhood centres? ..........138
5.2.1 Teachers’ beliefs regarding partnership obligations ..............................140
5.2.2 Summary ..................................................................................................151
5.3 Research question 5: What are staff perceptions of the nature of effective support or mothers? .................................................................153
5.3.1 Teachers’ beliefs about written communication as effective support ......155
5.3.2 Teachers’ beliefs about formal parent education as effective support ......163
5.3.3 The social nature of effective support .....................................................167
5.3.4 Summary ..................................................................................................173
5.4 Research question 6: To what extent can the early childhood centres be viewed as learning communities where the contribution of all participants is recognised and valued in terms of learning and social support? ..........................................................................................175
5.4.1 Collaborative decision making as a hallmark of learning communities .... 177
5.4.2 Playcentre training and implementation of new knowledge ............... 181
5.4.3 The concept of partnership .............................................................. 182
5.4.4 Summary .......................................................................................... 183
5.5 Chapter summary .................................................................................. 185

CHAPTER 6: Discussion of the results: Relationships of support (Propositions 1-3)

6.1 Introduction .......................................................................................... 186
6.2 Proposition 1: Support is contingent upon the active contribution of the mothers themselves ......................................................................... 188
6.2.1 Initial dis-empowerment for mothers .............................................. 192
6.3 Proposition 2: Support is conditional upon the development of relationships of trust at different levels within the centre community....... 193
6.3.1 Initial professional relationships with staff ..................................... 194
6.3.2 Peer relationships and intimate support .......................................... 196
6.4 Proposition 3: Effective early childhood communities are responsive to the changing needs of mothers ....................................... 199
6.5 Summary .............................................................................................. 201

CHAPTER 7: Discussion of results: Formal and informal systems of support
(Propositions 4-6)

7.1 Introduction .......................................................................................... 205
7.2 Proposition 4: Staff beliefs about their role as well as the centre structure are major determinants of the degree to which formal support is promoted ............................................................................................. 206
7.3 Proposition 5: Formal support involves planned delivery of information including parent education; informal support involves the exchange of everyday incidental information through social networks ..................... 209
7.3.1 Teachers’ formal parent information deliveries ............................... 210
7.3.2 Limited communication and reduced support within formal system ... 212
7.3.3 Non-transference of child learning principles to adults ..................... 216
CHAPTER 8: Conclusion and recommendations for further research

8.1 Introduction: Support for mothers by early childhood centres ............... 234
8.2 A synopsis of the research questions ......................................................... 234

8.2.1 To what degree do mothers believe they need and gain personal support as a result of being members of an early childhood centre? ........ 235
8.2.2 What according to first time mothers is the nature of effective support? .. 236
8.2.3 Can it be inferred that any support received by mothers from centres is responsive to their changing needs over time? ............................. 237
8.2.4 To what extent do staff believe they have a role in supporting mothers who attend early childhood centres? .............................................. 239
8.2.5 What are staff perceptions of the nature of effective support for mothers? .......................................................................................... 240
8.2.6 To what extent can early childhood centres be viewed as learning communities where the contribution of all participants is recognised and valued in terms of learning and support? .............................. 241

8.3 A synthesis of the theoretical propositions ................................................. 244
8.4 Links to other studies ................................................................................. 245

8.4.1 Mothers’ active support role through the establishment of relationships .. 246
8.4.2 Formal and informal support ..................................................................... 248

8.5 A review of the methodology and data collection methods with suggestions for further research ................................................................. 249
8.6 Implications of the present study for early childhood centre support for mothers .......................................................................................... 253
8.6.1 Increased collaboration in centre management ......................................... 255
LIST OF APPENDICES

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th>Description</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>A</td>
<td>Profiles of the four early childhood centres in the study</td>
<td>70</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>B</td>
<td>Information sheet for obtaining organisational consent to participate</td>
<td>70</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>C</td>
<td>Organisational consent form</td>
<td>70</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>D</td>
<td>Information sheet for individual maternal participants</td>
<td>71</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>E</td>
<td>Consent form for individual participants</td>
<td>76</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>F</td>
<td>Interview schedule for mothers (Interview 1)</td>
<td>76</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>G</td>
<td>Diary</td>
<td>76</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>H</td>
<td>Confidentiality agreement for transcriber</td>
<td>77</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>Interview schedule for mothers (Interview 2)</td>
<td>77</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>J</td>
<td>Information sheet for individual staff participants</td>
<td>78</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>K</td>
<td>Interview schedule for staff</td>
<td>78</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>L</td>
<td>Interviews: Sample of the process of coding and analysis</td>
<td>83</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>M</td>
<td>Diaries: Sample of the process of coding and analysis</td>
<td>83</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>N</td>
<td>Propositions: The original 12 before being reduced to six</td>
<td>86</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>O</td>
<td>Information sheet for focus group participants</td>
<td>88</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>P</td>
<td>Consent form for focus group participants</td>
<td>89</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Q</td>
<td>Focus group discussion questions</td>
<td>89</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
LIST OF TABLES

Table 1
Early childhood centres and participants .................................................................73

Table 2
Significant themes relevant to research question 1: To what degree do mothers believe they need and gain personal support as a result of being members of an early childhood centre? .................................................................91

Table 3
Significant themes relevant to research question 2: What according to first time mothers is the nature of effective support? .................................................................108

Table 4
Significant themes relevant to research question 3: Can it be inferred that any support received by mothers from centres is responsive to their changing needs over time? .......130

Table 5
Significant themes relevant to research question 4: To what extent do the staff believe they have a role in supporting mothers who attend early childhood centres? .................138

Table 6 - Significant themes relevant to research question 5: What are staff perceptions of the nature of effective support for mothers? .........................................................153

Table 7 - Significant themes relevant to research question 6: To what extent can the early childhood centres be viewed as learning communities where the contribution of all participants is recognised and valued in terms of learning and social support? .......175
LIST OF FIGURES

Figure 1 Flow Chart: The process of conducting the research.......................... 68

Figure 2 Flow chart: Theory generation the process of development of a set of six propositions .................................................................................. 90

Figure 3 Mothers’ active relationship building determined a range of ongoing support........................................................................................................ 209

Figure 4 Systems of support in early childhood centres in the study............... 238
GLOSSARY

Centre: Denotes an early childhood service, licensed to provide education and custodial care for children up to age five years. In this study it refers to four types of community based organisations.

Community kindergarten: This is a centre that provides sessional care and education, being a non-profit organisation administered by a management committee within community premises.

Education Review Office (ERO) The government office (established 1989 at the time of educational reforms) that is responsible for evaluating the performance of early childhood centres and schools to ensure continued accountability.

Free kindergarten: This is a centre that operates under the auspices of the Free Kindergarten Association in New Zealand. It is non-profit making and offers sessional education programmes.

Maori: A member of the “tangata whenua” the original people to settle in New Zealand.

Ministry of Education: A government organisation that in 1989 replaced the former Department of Education, and is responsible for ensuring national educational policies are implemented as well as overseeing finances.

Playcentre: This is a centre that operates under the auspices of the New Zealand Playcentre Federation, also a non-profit group it offers training for parents, who manage the centre as a parent-co-operative.

Playgroup: A regular, informal, parent-led initiative where parents meet with their children (usually license exempt). However, in the study because the playgroup operated under the license of a community kindergarten it was subject to review by the Education Review Office (ERO).

Social capital: Resources gained and exchanged through social networks

Statement of Desirable Articulates the government's expectations (through the Objectives (DOPs): Ministry of Education) of early childhood providers in terms of guiding principles and goals.

Te Whaariki

This is a Maori expression, translated it refers to an “interwoven mat” that was selected as the title for the bi-cultural Early Childhood Curriculum document used in licensed early childhood centres (Ministry of Education, 1996).

Teacher:

Denotes a qualified person who teaches and has attained the status of a Diploma of Teaching (ECE) and who is employed to teach in an early childhood centre.