Copyright is owned by the Author of the thesis. Permission is given for a copy to be downloaded by an individual for the purpose of research and private study only. The thesis may not be reproduced elsewhere without the permission of the Author.
The New English Curriculum
A Study of Text Complexity in
Reading and Written English

A thesis submitted as partial fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of Master of Education Massey University Palmerston North New Zealand

Hilary S. Capper

1998
Abstract

This research examines the teaching methods in a Year 7 distance education English programme in relation to text complexity in reading and written English. It considers student performance, processes, resources and teaching strategies.

The research focuses on the assessment and teaching of text complexity in reading and written English in relation to student aptitude. It explores how the students' needs were met in the years 1996-1997 and considers the implications for teachers of the new English curriculum in relation to the assessment and teaching of text complexity. Consideration is also given to criticism of the new English curriculum especially where it is relevant to the teaching of text complexity in reading and written English.

The thesis therefore has two aspects to it. Firstly the criticisms of the new curriculum and the English curriculum, in particular, are examined and the implications these criticisms may have for the teaching of text complexity are considered. Secondly a Year 7 English programme developed in distance mode at The Correspondence School is researched in light of the requirements of the new English curriculum as it relates to text complexity in reading and written English.
Acknowledgements

The author gratefully acknowledges the support, guidance and encouragement of Professor Tom Prebble and Professor John Codd during the course of this research. Thanks are due to the teaching and administrative staff at The Correspondence School who made their help available in spite of demanding schedules.

The author would especially like to thank her family for the ongoing encouragement and support: her husband David Capper, and her daughters Julia and Athena.
Table of Contents

i) Abstract
   - i

ii) Acknowledgements
   - ii

iii) Table of Contents
   - iii

iv) List of Figures
   - ix

v) List of Tables
   - xi

Chapter One
Introduction

1.1 Research Objective

1.2 Research Aims

1.3 Approach to Study

1.4 Format of Thesis

1.5 Specific Issues Related to the Study

Chapter Two
The New Zealand Curriculum Framework

2.1 Background

2.2 Description of the Curriculum Framework

2.3 Criticism of the New Curriculum

2.4 Summary

7
9
10
14
Chapter Three
Assessment and the New Curriculum

3.1 The Assessment Requirements in the New Curriculum 15
3.2 Criticism of the New Assessment Requirements 17
   The Purpose and Process of Assessment 18
   Assessment for Diagnosis or Accountability 21
   Standards 22
   Difficulties 23
3.3 Summary 25

Chapter Four
Reading and Written English in the New Curriculum 27

4.1 A Description of the English Curriculum in Relation to the Teaching of Reading and Written English 27
4.2 Criticism of the New Zealand English Curriculum 29
4.3 Summary 36

Chapter Five
Implementation Issues for the New English Curriculum and Distance Education 38

5.1 A Description of Distance Education 38
5.2 The Implementation of Levels Placement and Text Complexity in Relation to Learning Theory in Distance Education 40
5.3 Challenges for Distance Education 42
5.4 Bridging the Gap Between Policy and Practice 47
5.5 Summary 49
Chapter Six
Methodology

6.1 Research Design

Illuminative Evaluation
Triangulation
Observation
Interviewing
Questionnaires

Data gathering
- The Correspondence School class teacher assessment of reading ages and written English grades
- Independent assessment of reading ages
- Independent assessment of written English
- Survey of supervisors' and students' opinions on the appropriateness of the level of work in reading and written English
- Survey of English programme levels placement in relation to reading ages and written English grades
- Analysis of reading ages of the reading extracts in the FLA100 course
- The Correspondence School class teacher interview

Justification for Population
Research Sample
Justification for Sample
Ethical Considerations

6.2 Summary

Chapter Seven
The Assessment Instruments

7.1 Independent Reading Assessment
Construction of the Informal Prose Inventory
Chapter Eight
Results

8.1 Reading Age Results
Spread of Reading Age Results in Relation to Chronological Age of the Year 7 Students at The Correspondence School 78
A Comparison of Class Teachers' Estimations of Student Reading Ages with the Regional Representatives' Assessment 79
Comparison of Reading Ages Between The Correspondence School and a Non-distance School 80

8.2 Programme Placement in Relation to Students' Reading Ages
Survey of the Reading Ages of the Reading Extracts in the Year 7 English Course FLA100 81
Programme Placement of Year 7 Students in Relation to Reading Age Levels 82

8.3 Supervisors' and Students' Opinions of the Suitability of the Reading Extracts in Their English Programme
Supervisors' Opinions on the Suitability of the Reading Extracts in the English Programme 84
Students' Response to Reading Extract Suitability 84

8.4 Written English Results
Comparison of Class Teachers' Estimation of Written English Grades with the Independent English Grades 85
Independent Written English Grades of The Correspondence School Year 7 Students 86
Comparison of Written English Grades Between The Correspondence School and a Non-distance School 87
Grading of Written English Skills in Text Complexity 87
8.5 Supervisors' and Students' Opinions of the Written English Exercises in the English Programme
Supervisors' Opinions of the Suitability of Written English Exercises in the English Programme
Students' Opinions of the Written English Exercises in the English Programme

8.6 A Comparison of Reading, Written English and Programme Grades in Relation to Programme Placement

8.7 Attempt at Triangulation of Reading Age and Written English, Programme Placement, and Supervisors' Opinions
Triangulation of Reading Ages, Programme Placement and Supervisors' Opinion
Triangulation of Written English, Programme Placement and Supervisors' Opinion

8.8 Results of the Interview with Class Teacher
8.9 Results from the Questionnaires
8.10 Programme Placement Stemming From Data Results
8.11 Summary

Chapter Nine
Discussion and Conclusions

9.1 Discussion of Reading Age Results
Assessment of Reading Ages
Programme Placement of Students
Catering for Gifted and Remedial Students
Supervisor and Student Opinion of the Suitability of the Reading Extracts
Reading Standards at The Correspondence School

9.2 Discussion of Written English Results
Assessment of Written English
Suitability of Programme Placement
List of Figures

Chapter 7

7.1 Comparison of the Informal Prose Inventory test and the Progressive Achievement Test Results 70

Chapter 8

8.2 Reading Ages in Relation to Chronological Age 79
8.3 Comparison of Class Teachers' Estimation of Reading Ages with Regional Representatives' Assessment of Ages 80
8.4 Comparison of Reading Ages in Relation to Chronological Age Between The Correspondence School and a Non-distance School 80
8.5 Reading Ages of the Reading Extracts in the FLA100 Course 81
8.6 Programme Placement of Year 7 Students at The Correspondence School 82
8.7 Percentage of Supervisor Opinion on the Suitability of the Reading Extracts for their Student 84
8.8 Student Assessment of the Difficulty of Reading Extracts 85
8.9 Class Teachers’ Estimation of Written English Grades with Independent Grades 86
8.10 Independent Written English Grades at The Correspondence School 86
8.11 Comparison Between Written English Grades of The Correspondence School and a Non-distance School 87
8.12 Grading of Written English Skills for Text Complexity 87
8.13 Percentage of Reading Age Grades that Match Programme Grades 90
8.14 Percentage of Written English Grades that Match Programme Grades 90
8.15 A Comparison of the Reading, Written English and Programme Grades that Matched Programme Placement 91
8.16 Triangulation of Reading Ages, Programme Placement and Supervisor Opinion

8.17 Triangulation of Written English, Programme Placement and Supervisor Opinion
List of Tables

Chapter 8

8.1 Reading Ages of the Reading Extracts in the FLA100 Course 81
8.2 Programme Placement of the Year 7 Students at The Correspondence School in Relation to Reading Ages 83
8.3 Grading of Written English Skills for Text Complexity for 60 Students at The Correspondence School 88