Copyright is owned by the Author of the thesis. Permission is given for a copy to be downloaded by an individual for the purpose of research and private study only. The thesis may not be reproduced elsewhere without the permission of the Author.
Is It a Dangerous Game?

Registered Nurses’ Experiences of Working with Care Assistants in a Public Hospital Setting

A thesis presented in partial fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of Master of Arts in Nursing at Massey University

Christine M. F. Herd
2001
Financial constraints in the rapidly changing health care climate have resulted in a trend towards the employment of care assistants in public hospitals. Registered nurses are often the staff who work most closely with these care assistants. The aim of this qualitative descriptive study was to explore the experiences of registered nurse participants who worked with care assistants in a particular public hospital setting. Although there is a considerable amount of international research on registered nurses working with care assistants and issues relating to this topic, this topic has not been researched in the New Zealand context.

This study’s participants were drawn from a regional hospital that formally introduced a training programme for care assistants in the mid-90s. Before this some hospital aids with no formal training were employed by the institution. These hospital aids were then encouraged to join the care assistant programme.

Eight registered nurses participated in semi-structured interviews. The data were analysed using Burnard’s (1991) thematic content analysis, which led to the development of three overarching themes. The first theme, ‘I’m not sure what care assistants should be doing’, reflected the perception of the participants that the role of the care assistants was ill defined, and that the care assistants’ contribution was limited by their lack of qualification. In the second theme ‘we have overall responsibility for the work of the care assistant’, the participants perceived that their job had become more difficult with care assistants, and that they had to be careful when assigning tasks to the care assistants for fear of compromising patient safety. The participants’ perception of the registered nurse being responsible for unregulated care assistants and the legal implications this could have on their own nursing practice was of concern. The final theme, ‘we were never really taught to delegate’ reflected participants’ concerns that they had no formal education in delegating to and supervising care assistants. Furthermore, the participants’ lack of involvement in care assistants’ training and in assessment of their competency resulted in the participants being unaware of the care assistants’ capabilities.
Overall, the study suggests that clear directives be put in place for registered nurses when working with care assistants’, and that registered nurses require further education about their own legal obligations as health professionals. If registered nurses are to be involved in delegating work to and supervising unregulated staff, then they need to have formal education in these skills.
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I extend my gratitude and thanks to the many people who have contributed to the completion of this thesis. It was their encouragement, support and interest in what I was doing that inspired me through this sometimes long, challenging and often frustrating process of completing a Masters thesis.

The participants who made this study possible, I would like to thank you for your participation in this research and for sharing your experiences and thoughts with me.

To my research supervisor, Lesley Batten. I offer my sincere gratitude and special thanks for your guidance, support and encouragement. Without your support and belief in me this work might not have been completed.

A special thank you to my family and friends for your tolerance, your understanding and belief that I could do it. Thank you for allowing me the time and space to complete this thesis.
TABLE OF CONTENTS

ABSTRACT ................................................................................................................. ii

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS ................................................................................................. iv

CHAPTER ONE. ................................................................................................................ 1

Background To The Study .............................................................................................. 1

  - Introduction .................................................................................................................. 1
  - The Study ..................................................................................................................... 1
  - The Researcher's Interest ............................................................................................. 2
  - Conclusion .................................................................................................................... 5

Thesis Outline .................................................................................................................. 7

  - Chapter two: Review of the literature ....................................................................... 7
  - Chapter three: Research design and method .............................................................. 7
  - Chapter four: Theme: I'm not really sure what care assistants should be doing .... 7
  - Chapter five: Theme: We have overall responsibility for work of the care assistant.. 7
  - Chapter six: Theme: We were never really taught to delegate .................................. 7
  - Chapter seven: Discussion ......................................................................................... 7

CHAPTER TWO. ................................................................................................................. 8

A Review of the Literature ................................................................................................. 8

  - Introduction .................................................................................................................. 8
  - Literature Search ......................................................................................................... 9
  - Issues And Themes From The Literature ................................................................... 11
  - Changing trends and the use of care assistants .......................................................... 11
  - The care assistant role requires clarification ............................................................. 12
  - Attitudes towards care assistants .............................................................................. 14
  - Basic nursing care and non-nursing functions ............................................................ 15
They are task orientated ................................................................. 56
They Should Have A Qualification .................................................. 56
I’d rather have enrolled nurses ....................................................... 58
It’s unfair on the care assistant ...................................................... 60
Limited knowledge could be dangerous ........................................... 61
Summary ..................................................................................... 62

CHAPTER FIVE ............................................................................. 63

We Have Overall Responsibility for the Work Of Care Assistants .... 63
Introduction ................................................................................... 63
Sometimes You Have To Be Really Careful ....................................... 64
Our job is harder with care assistants .............................................. 66
Care assistants overstep the boundaries .......................................... 68
Care assistants are given too much responsibility ............................ 73
I need to know they are capable .................................................... 76
We Are Concerned About The Legalities ........................................ 77
Who’s accountable in a court of law? ............................................. 78
It’s dangerous nursing .................................................................. 80
What if some thing goes wrong? ................................................... 81
Summary ..................................................................................... 82

CHAPTER SIX ............................................................................ 83

We Were Never Really Taught to Delegate ....................................... 83
Introduction ................................................................................... 83
They Take Direction And Action From Our Cues ............................... 84
To me delegation is quite scary .................................................... 85
We learned delegation from others ............................................... 86
The experience to delegate ............................................................. 87