Copyright is owned by the Author of the thesis. Permission is given for a copy to be downloaded by an individual for the purpose of research and private study only. The thesis may not be reproduced elsewhere without the permission of the Author.
Searching for a place to belong: A narrative study of parental perspectives of gifted children's learning environments

A thesis presented in partial fulfilment of the requirements of the degree of

Master of Education

At Massey University, Palmerston North,
New Zealand

Francesca Hickey
2015
Acknowledgements

Thank you to all the participants of this study who generously gave up their time to tell the stories of their children’s experiences at primary and intermediate school and who offered insights on the re-storying and the interpretation of their stories.

Thank you also to my supervisors Tracy Riley and Vijaya Dharan for their wisdom, guidance and patience.

Finally, thank you to my family for all their support and encouragement.
Abstract

Gifted children have unique social, emotional and learning needs, which if not met may result in negative effects on their emotional well-being. The aim of this study was to understand the experiences of nine primary school age gifted children within their New Zealand learning environments and to examine how these experiences affected their emotional well-being. A narrative research design was used to generate stories, based on interviews with their parents, of the children’s experiences in their learning environments. The overarching theme, present in all the parents’ accounts, was that a sense of belonging within the learning environment was vital to the well-being of their children. On the occasions when the children felt that they did not belong within their learning environment their emotional well-being suffered. A sense of belonging was found to occur when the children’s social, emotional and learning needs were catered for. Advocacy by the parents and appropriate pedagogy of the classroom teachers were fundamental to ensuring that this sense of belonging was nurtured. Recommendations stemming from this study include the provision for the training of pre-service and in-service teachers in recognising and responding to the needs of gifted children.
Contents

Acknowledgements ................................................................. ii
Abstract ................................................................................. iii
Contents ................................................................................ iv
List of figures .......................................................................... vi

Introduction ...................................................................... 1

Purpose of this study ........................................................... 2

Organisation of the thesis ..................................................... 2

Literature Review ............................................................. 4

Gifted students ........................................................................ 4

Learning preferences and characteristics .......................... 9

Teachers ................................................................................. 11

Learning environments ....................................................... 13

Summary ............................................................................... 15

Methodology .................................................................... 17

What is narrative research? ................................................ 17

Types of narrative research ................................................ 18

Why is narrative research appropriate for this study? .... 19

The place of the researcher in narrative research ............... 20

Position of the researcher ..................................................... 20

Interactions between the researcher and participants ....... 21

Ethical considerations .......................................................... 22

Inviting the participants ....................................................... 23

Choosing the participants .................................................... 25

The interview process .......................................................... 25

Data analysis ......................................................................... 27

Presenting the participants’ narratives .............................. 28

Summary ............................................................................... 28

The Stories ....................................................................... 30

The participants’ stories ....................................................... 30

Megan .................................................................................. 30

Michael ............................................................................... 34

Simon .................................................................................. 37

Toby ..................................................................................... 40
List of figures

Figure 1: Factors required for a gifted learner to experience belonging at school. ............................. 78