Copyright is owned by the Author of the thesis. Permission is given for a copy to be downloaded by an individual for the purpose of research and private study only. The thesis may not be reproduced elsewhere without the permission of the Author.
THE SILENT REVOLUTION

DISABLED PEOPLE DISCUSS REGAINING
POWER AND CONTROL IN THEIR LIVES

GUY PATRICK OSKAR BURNS

A thesis presented in partial fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of Master of Social Work (MSW)

Massey University, Palmerston North, New Zealand
2008
ABSTRACT

Since the 1960s, a silent revolution has occurred, brought about by disabled people taking control of their lives. This thesis attempts to gain an understanding of this process, particularly in the area of disability residential services in Aotearoa New Zealand. A qualitative methodological design is used. This relies heavily on the social model of disability and Foucault’s ideas, to carry out an explorative interpretative study. The stories of five disabled people, who moved from provider-supplied accommodation to their own homes, form the heart of this treatise. Participants explain how they achieved this transition. Three predominant themes were noted in participants’ biographies – factors which enabled the move out, features that hindered such a move, and elements that support their new lifestyles.
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

To the research participants, who allowed me to intrude into their lives – I acknowledge you with gratitude and thanks. It was not easy to go back into the past, especially when recounting some of the difficult events that occurred. Your voices form the basis of this thesis. Once again, many thanks.

My supervisors, Dr Martin Sullivan and Jenny Jakobs, were a great support and help. Martin, your knowledge on disability issues is inspiring. Jenny, I appreciated your direct comments. The feedback kept me in line with the objectives of my task. When I became stuck in a logjam of uncertainty, your spoken and written words gave me the motivation and strength to get moving again. I thank you both for the guidance, advice and wisdom that I received.

To my family – I am grateful for your support, especially that of my long-suffering wife Lynette, who at times found my demands for time and resources quite difficult. I also acknowledge the support of my children, meine Mutter, sister and brother – thanks.

Finally to Rose Kingston, my community neighbour, fellow chess-player, and most importantly, expert proof-reader, your fantastic knowledge of the English language has been much appreciated.
TABLE OF CONTENTS

ABSTRACT .................................................................................................................. ii

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS .......................................................................................... iii

LIST OF FIGURES AND TABLES ................................................................................ viii

CHAPTER ONE – INTRODUCTION ............................................................................... 1

  Research focus ........................................................................................................ 2
  Personal statement .................................................................................................. 3
  Format and structure of the thesis ......................................................................... 3

CHAPTER TWO – DISABILITY CONCEPTS DETERMINING THE PERSPECTIVE ... 7

  Discourse and Power ............................................................................................. 7
  Discourse ................................................................................................................ 8
  Power ....................................................................................................................... 9
  Medical Model ....................................................................................................... 11
  Impacts of medical model ..................................................................................... 13
  Social Model of Disability ..................................................................................... 14
  Concepts of the social model ............................................................................... 15
  Limits of the social model .................................................................................... 16
  Response to critique .............................................................................................. 19
  Maori Views Regarding Disability ........................................................................ 20
  Te Whare Tapa Wha model ................................................................................ 20

SELF-EMPOWERMENT ............................................................................................... 21

  Centres for Independent Living .......................................................................... 22
  Aotearoa New Zealand Initiatives ........................................................................ 23
  Factors Promoting Self-Empowerment ................................................................ 24
  At the macro view ................................................................................................. 24
  A meso view .......................................................................................................... 26
  A micro view ......................................................................................................... 30

CHAPTER THREE – DISABILITY DISCOURSES SETTING THE CONTEXT TO DISABILITY IN AOTEAROA NEW ZEALAND ....................................................... 33

  The Discourse of Deserving Poor ......................................................................... 34
    Beginnings of institutionalised care ..................................................................... 35
  Eugenics and the Medicalisation of Disability ..................................................... 36
    Increased government involvement ................................................................... 36
    Institutionalisation .............................................................................................. 38
  The Discourse of Reaction: The Development of Independent Providers and Consumer Groups ................................................................. 39
Winds of Change: Deinstitutionalisation and the Social Model of Disability

ACC Legislation
Disabled Persons Community Welfare Act 1975
Community Care Scheme
Normalisation
New Deal Initiative
Closing of Institutions
New Zealand Disability Strategy 2001
To Have an Ordinary Life Report 2003
Like Minds Project
Closing of Kimberly

CURRENT SITUATION

CHAPTER FOUR – METHODS OF DOING THE RESEARCH

METHODOLOGY
Participatory research
Ecological perspective

PRINCIPLES FOR THE RESEARCH PROJECT
1 Research to be beneficial for disabled people
2 Research will focus on the strengths, abilities, resources and attributes of disabled people
3 Research will have a self-empowering orientation
4 The researcher will be reflective

Qualitative Method
Strengths of the qualitative approach
Critique of qualitative research

Qualitative Interviews
Benefits of the qualitative interviewing method
Empathetic interviewing approach

SPECIFIC PROCEDURES
Ethical Concerns
Recruiting participants
The interviews
Data analysis

CHAPTER FIVE – THE STORIES OF FIVE PEOPLE

The Participants
Alan
Caleb
Elliot
Jack
Nancy
Differences and similarities regarding background information
Presentation of data
1 ENABLING FACTORS ...................................................... 69
Personality clashes ...................................................... 69
Provider dissatisfaction .............................................. 71
Family support ............................................................ 72
Goals and aspirations .................................................. 73
Staff positive support .................................................. 74
Need for greater control ............................................. 76
Support of friends ....................................................... 77
The need for privacy ..................................................... 78
Negative staff experiences .......................................... 79
Availability of state housing ......................................... 80
Family financial resources ........................................... 81
Self-educational skills .................................................. 82
Government policy, financial disincentive and the stigma of living in a provider home ........................................ 83
External social networks .............................................. 84

2 DISABLING FACTORS .................................................. 85
Sense of family and companionship ............................... 85
Routines and activities of provider ................................ 86
Financial disincentive ................................................... 87
Staff influence ............................................................. 88

3 SUPPORT FACTORS .................................................... 89
Family support ............................................................. 89
Disability Support Services (DSS) ................................ 90
Social networks ........................................................... 92
State housing ............................................................... 92
Employment ................................................................. 93

CHAPTER SIX - DISCUSSION .......................................... 94

Returning to the research aims .................................... 94
ENABLING FACTORS FOR CHOOSING TO MOVE .............. 95
Biopower and resistance .............................................. 95
Support of others ......................................................... 96
Self control ................................................................. 97
Staff actions ................................................................. 98
Social networks ........................................................... 98
Self-empowering factors ............................................. 99
Contextual features ..................................................... 100

DISABLING FACTORS .................................................... 102
Sense of family ........................................................... 102
Financial disincentives to leave ................................... 103
Staff influence and the routines and activities of the providers ...... 103
LIST OF FIGURES AND TABLES

TABLE 1: Participant details, part A ................................................................. 67
TABLE 2: Participant details, part B ................................................................. 67
FIGURE 1: Wheel of transition ........................................................................... 101
FIGURE 2: Enabling, disabling and support factors identified in the research .................................................................................................................. 112