Copyright is owned by the Author of the thesis. Permission is given for a copy to be downloaded by an individual for the purpose of research and private study only. The thesis may not be reproduced elsewhere without the permission of the Author.
Self-review in Early Childhood Education: "What's it all about?"

A thesis presented in partial fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of

Masters of Education

at Massey University, Palmerston North, New Zealand.

Sandra May Collins

2007
Abstract

An increased focus on self-review in early childhood education (ECE) in New Zealand has been influenced by the educational and political context of the past 15 years. The requirement for early childhood services to undertake internal review has been a feature of the regulatory framework since 1998 (and the requirement to undertake programme review has been in place since 1990). The Education Review Office (ERO) has given more emphasis to self-review through changes to its external review methodology since 1998, and self-review has been an area of national interest in all early childhood education reviews since 2005.

Through the analysis of a sample of ERO reports, this research seeks to understand how external review has shaped and influenced thinking and practice associated with self-review in ECE services. The analysis of ERO's findings about self-review, as reported in accountability review reports (undertaken between 1998-2002) and education review reports (undertaken in 2005), revealed a complex milieu of activity that spanned everything that those who are involved in early childhood education services do as part of the operation of their service.

This research also examined the political and educational contexts in which self-review understandings and practices have developed in early childhood services. The review of the literature illuminates how self-review has been defined, researched and practiced. The educational reforms that introduced charters and concepts of accountability and self-management to education in New Zealand in the late 1980s and early 1990s were a feature of the early childhood education landscape that gave rise to expectations of improved quality and increased accountability.

This research explored the shifts that have taken place in ECE services as reported by ERO and discussed in the context of the time. The relationship between self-review and external review is identified as needing revisiting and substantive discussion to explore ways that these two evaluative processes can be truly complementary.
Acknowledgements

Firstly I wish to acknowledge those colleagues I have worked with in recent years for their aroha and support. Completing this thesis has been possible because of their willingness to listen and offer encouragement. My professional roles as a reviewer for the Education Review Office, and more recently in the Ministry of Education leading the development of self-review guidelines for early childhood services, played a key role in stimulating my interest in self-review as a research topic.

I thank my family for their understanding and belief that I could complete my research. In particular I acknowledge my dad and my step dad, both of whom passed away last year. Their gentle prodding and genuine interest in what I was doing and how it was going, motivated me when I was ready to give it all away. To my children, Aimee, Harlyn and Bayley – without you I would not have developed my passion for early childhood education and my interest in keeping on learning. Becoming granny to my granddaughter Mackenzie, and her involvement in early childhood education during the time I was writing up my findings, gave relevance and meaning to the importance of high quality early childhood education and the place self-review plays in supporting improvement.

I would also like to specifically thank my friends and colleagues: Jayne White for helping me get started; Patricia Davey for being my sounding board when I needed to test my thinking; Brenda Morrison for her wise counsel and advice at times when I needed fresh eyes on my research; and Patricia Laurenson for her attention to detail in editing the final chapters.

Finally I would like to acknowledge Professor Wayne Edwards, who as my supervisor took an avid interest in my research topic and offered much needed encouragement and feedback.
Table of contents

Abstract .................................................................................................................. 2
Acknowledgments .................................................................................................... 3
Table of contents: .................................................................................................... 4
List of tables ............................................................................................................ 7
List of figures .......................................................................................................... 7
Abbreviations .......................................................................................................... 8

Chapter 1 Introduction ............................................................................................. 9
  1.1 Rationale ........................................................................................................... 9
  1.2 Background ...................................................................................................... 10
  1.3 Overview of methodology ............................................................................... 11
  1.4 Research problem ............................................................................................ 11
  1.5 Research questions .......................................................................................... 12
  1.6 Limitations of the research ............................................................................. 13
  1.7 Organisation of the thesis .............................................................................. 13

Chapter 2 Literature Review .................................................................................... 15
  2.1 Introduction ..................................................................................................... 15
  2.2 Education reforms ......................................................................................... 16
  2.3 Accountability .................................................................................................. 18
  2.4 The emergence of external review .................................................................... 20
  2.5 The Education Review Office under review .................................................... 21
  2.6 Emergence of self-review ................................................................................ 23
  2.7 Defining self-review ...................................................................................... 23
  2.8 Self-review in ECE: a brief international perspective ....................................... 25
  2.9 Self-review in early childhood education in New Zealand ................................ 27
  2.10 Self-review as a requirement in ECE ............................................................... 30
  2.11 ERO and self-review .................................................................................... 30
  2.12 Research and self-review ............................................................................. 35
  2.13 Relationship between external review and self-review ................................ 39
  2.14 Conclusion .................................................................................................... 41

Chapter 3 Methodology ........................................................................................... 42
  3.1 Introduction ..................................................................................................... 42
  3.2 Methodological framework .......................................................................... 42
    3.2.1 Underpinning theories ............................................................................. 44
    3.2.2 Historical research .................................................................................. 46
    3.2.3 Document analysis ................................................................................. 46
  3.3 The documentation ......................................................................................... 47
  3.4 Selection of data .............................................................................................. 48
    3.4.1 Time periods for reports ......................................................................... 48
    3.4.2 The selection process .............................................................................. 49
    3.4.3 Selecting the relevant excerpts of text .................................................... 50
  3.5 Analysis – making sense of the data ............................................................... 51
    3.5.1 Computer assisted or manual approach to data analysis ....................... 52
    3.5.2 Categories and coding ........................................................................... 52
    3.5.3 Scrutinising the data .............................................................................. 54
  3.6 Ethical considerations ..................................................................................... 55
Chapter 4 Findings

4.1 Introduction ................................................. 57
4.2 Getting underway with self-review ............................... 58
  4.2.1 The language of review ............................................. 58
  4.2.2 Understanding review ............................................. 59
  4.2.3 Rating the ‘a’ reports ............................................. 59
  4.2.4 Programme review and curriculum .................................. 61
  4.2.5 Reasons why services review ........................................ 62
  4.2.6 Focus of review ............................................. 62
  4.2.7 Improving review - recommendations .................................. 64
  4.2.8 Meeting requirements - compliance .................................. 64
  4.2.9 Formalising review ............................................. 65
  4.2.10 Analysis and review ............................................. 65
  4.2.11 Professional development and use of resources .................... 66
  4.2.12 Support for review ............................................. 66
  4.2.13 Long and short term planning and review ........................... 66
  4.2.14 Reflection and review ............................................. 67
  4.2.15 Reference to appraisal ............................................. 67
  4.2.16 Use of information in review and use of self-review findings ........................... 67
4.3 Progressing with self-review ........................................ 67
  4.3.1 The language of review ............................................. 68
  4.3.2 Understanding review ............................................. 68
  4.3.3 Rating the ‘b’ reports ............................................. 69
  4.3.4 Programme review and curriculum .................................. 70
  4.3.5 Reasons why services review ........................................ 70
  4.3.6 Focus of review ............................................. 71
  4.3.7 Improving review - recommendations .................................. 71
  4.3.8 Meeting requirements for review - compliance ........................... 72
  4.3.9 Areas of good performance and areas for improvement .................. 73
  4.3.10 Good performance ............................................. 73
  4.3.11 Improvement ............................................. 76
  4.3.12 Professional development and use of resources ......... 79
  4.3.13 Support for review ............................................. 80
4.4 Comparing the ‘a’ and ‘b’ reports ................................. 80
  4.4.1 Shifts in ratings ............................................. 81
  4.4.2 Recommendations ............................................. 82
  4.4.3 Actions required for compliance .................................. 82
  4.4.4 Accountability and/or improvement .................................. 83
  4.4.5 Undertaking review ............................................. 83
  4.4.6 Timing of review ............................................. 84
  4.4.7 Involvement in review ............................................. 85
  4.4.8 Links to teaching and learning ..................................... 85
  4.4.9 Links to other practices ............................................. 86
4.5 Conclusion ............................................. 87
Chapter 5 Discussion

5.1 Introduction ......................................................................................................... 88
5.2 Making sense of self-review in ECE ................................................................. 89
  5.2.1 Defining review ......................................................................................... 89
  5.3.2 Understanding self-review ....................................................................... 94
  5.3.3 Self-review practice .................................................................................. 97
  5.3.4 Evaluating self-review .............................................................................. 98
5.4 Educational and political influences on self-review ....................................... 100
  5.4.1 Political influences ................................................................................. 100
  5.4.2 Educational influences .......................................................................... 101
5.5 What counts as self-review? ........................................................................... 102
5.6 Shifts in thinking and practice ...................................................................... 105
5.7 Conclusion ........................................................................................................ 108

Chapter 6 Conclusion

6.1 Summary of the research study ....................................................................... 109
6.2 Key findings ...................................................................................................... 110
6.3 Implications for early childhood education .................................................... 111

References .......................................................................................................... 112

Legislation ................................................................................................................. 121
List of tables

Table 1: Methodological framework .................................................. 43
Table 2: Sample of ERO reports from different ECE services ................. 48
Table 3: Regional sample of numbers of reports .................................. 48
Table 4: Time periods for A and B reports ......................................... 49
Table 5: Sample of ERO reports as coded for analysis ......................... 50
Table 6: Reference to review in ‘a’ reports ........................................ 58
Table 7: Actions for compliance in ‘a’ reports .................................... 65
Table 8: Recommendations in the ‘a’ and ‘b’ reports .......................... 82
Table 9: Actions for compliance in ‘a’ and ‘b’ reports ......................... 82
Table 10: Reference to learning and teaching in the ‘a’ and ‘b’ reports .... 85
Table 11: Reference to children’s learning and development in ‘a’ and ‘b’ reports .... 85
Table 12: Definitions of self-review .............................................. 91

List of figures

Figure 1: ‘a’ report ratings ............................................................. 60
Figure 2: ‘b’ report ratings ............................................................. 69
Figure 3: Accountability and improvement in ‘a’ and ‘b’ reports .......... 83
Figure 4: Self-review and external review ....................................... 112
Abbreviations
ERO Education Review Office
ECE Early childhood education
DOPs Statement of Desirable Objectives and Practices
ECa Education and care services - accountability review reports -1998- 2002
ECb Education and care services- education review reports - 2005
Ka Kindergartens - accountability review reports -1998- 2002
Kb Kindergartens - education review reports - 2005
Pca Playcentres - accountability review reports -1998- 2002
Pcb Playcentres - education review reports – 2005
Reg. Regulation(s)