

HOME AFFORDABILITY REPORT

QUARTERLY SURVEY JUNE 2023, VOL 34, NO.2

OVERALL, HOME AFFORDABILITY HAS IMPROVED IN THIS QUARTER. THIS WAS BROADLY DRIVEN BY AN INCREASE IN INCOME AND DECREASE IN MEDIAN HOUSE PRICES IN MAJORITY OF THE REGIONS.

QUARTERLY RESULTS:

- At the national aggregate level, affordability has slightly improved in this quarter, attributed in this past quarter by decrease in median house prices in most of the regions and overall increase in income.
- Median house prices decreased in ten regions except Northland, Gisborne, Wellington, Nelson, West Coast and Southland. The greatest decline in median house prices (in percentage terms) has for the last quarter occurred in Tasman (12.4% or $105,000). In contrast, the median house prices increased in the West Coast region by 28% or $81,000.
- At the national level, overall median house prices slightly increased by 2.4% or $18,000 in this quarter.
- Overall affordability has slightly improved in this quarter (1.2% nationally). At the regional level, affordability has been generally improved in thirteen regions. In this quarter, the most significant changes being seen in Tasman (17.8% improvement) and West Coast (21.5% decline). The improvement in affordability is attributed to increase in weekly earnings and decrease in median house prices.
- Interest rate has slightly decreased in this quarter, by 0.01% to 7.07% as at April 2023. This contrasts with the medium-term trend of increasing interest rate, after started increasing from the previous six quarters by the Reserve Bank.
- Incomes have slightly increased by 3.5% in aggregate during the quarter, with all sixteen regions showing an increasing trend in average weekly earnings. The largest changes in income in the quarter occurred in Tasman (6.4% increase).

YEARLY RESULTS:

- At the national level, 7.1% annual decline in median house prices (-$60,000 decreased to $780,000) is partially supported by a 27.39% increase in two years mortgage interest rates, moving to 7.07% in April 2023 from 5.55% in April 2022. Overall weekly earnings were increased by 6.3%. This increase in earnings has not improved the overall affordability but decreased for the past 12-months period by 11.3%.
- This decline in affordability at the national level in the past 12 months is reflected in all fifteen regions except Taranaki. The greatest decline in affordability for the year are reported in Nelson by 20.3% and Northland by 16.9%. Median house prices decreased in all regions except Nelson (2.7% or $20,000 increased).

GENERAL TRENDS

- National House price to income ratios have slightly decreased in this quarter with house prices moving from 10.5 to 10.4 times annual wages.

QUARTERLY RESULTS:

- Affordability this quarter slightly improved nationally by 1.2% with a quarterly increase in median house prices of 2.4%.
- This quarter, the primary cause of the improvement in affordability has been due to decrease in median house prices in most of the regions and overall increase in income.

YEARLY RESULTS:

- The yearly results show a decline in affordability at the national level by 11.3%, reflected in all regions except Taranaki.
- The yearly driver of this change is an increase in residential mortgage interest rates, now at 7.07% compared to 5.5% a year ago.

TERMINOLOGY

Housing affordability for housing in New Zealand can be assessed by comparing the average weekly earnings with the median dwelling price and the mortgage interest rate. The earnings figure represents the money available to the family, or household unit, and the median dwelling price combined with the mortgage interest rates provide an indicator of the expense involved.

MEDIAN DWELLING PRICES

Median dwelling prices for various regions within New Zealand are released monthly by the REINZ. The figures are obtained from a survey of member agencies' sales during that specific month. There may be irregularities in the data resulting from errors in the returns or processing, but when individual returns are combined with those of other agencies the distortion is likely to be small. In some months there may be very few transactions and this can result in somewhat non-representative median prices. The REINZ continues to research ways of improving the quality of the data. The research, and other continuing action by the REINZ to monitor and improve data quality, should minimise data errors.
