

Copyright is owned by the Author of the thesis. Permission is given for a copy to be downloaded by an individual for the purpose of research and private study only. The thesis may not be reproduced elsewhere without the permission of the Author.

DESTIGMATISATION: A GROUNDED THEORY OF THE WORK OF SEXUAL HEALTH NURSES.

A thesis submitted in partial fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of Master of Philosophy in Nursing at Massey University.

Annette Mortensen
2000

ABSTRACT

The aim of this grounded theory study is to identify, describe, and generate a theoretical explanation of what it means to practice sexual health nursing care in New Zealand in the 1990's and new century. Further, to investigate individual nurse's experiences within the current sociopolitical climate of health care. Sixteen participants from six sexual health clinics in New Zealand were interviewed over a period of eight months and a total of 24 hours of tape recorded data were collected. Constant comparative analysis of data eventuated in the identification of four conceptual categories named as identifying, personalisation, respecting and dignifying, advocating and empowering, and doing deviant work. These conceptual categories were drawn together in the core category, which is termed destigmatising.

Countering stigma emerged as a recurrent problem for nurses in this study. An analysis of nurses' counter reactions is compared to Gilmore and Somerville's (1994) model of stigmatised reactions towards people with sexually transmitted diseases. The model describes the processes of disidentification, depersonalisation, scapegoating, and discrimination, which characterise stigmatised reactions. Destigmatising in the context of this study means that the nurse is engaged in the process of counteracting the prejudice and negative social attitudes towards people who attend sexual health clinics and who have sexually transmitted infections. The process occurs in the interactions between the nurse, the client and the community. This process is dynamic and reflects changes in patterns of social sexual relations in society and community attitudes towards these.

Essentially this study shows that nurses' processes of destigmatisation are based on a complex of factors affected by the gender, culture, and sexuality of both the practitioner and the client. Nurses' understandings of the impact of socioeconomic conditions and gender/power relations in society have an important role to play in how nurses manage care.

The understanding of client fears and anxieties, of underlying social attitudes and of the problems of marginalised subcultures and individuals is important information for practicing sexual and reproductive health nursing care. As well, nurses in this study encountered professional stigma. The practice of sexual health care results in being professionally marginalised. Implications and recommendations in regard to sexual and reproductive health nursing education, practice, and further research are made.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This research was made possible with the support and encouragement of Sexual Health nurses in New Zealand who were generous and open in sharing their experiences and knowledge. My deep respect and admiration is extended to the study participants for their passion and commitment to this complex and challenging work.

This has been a two year process of intense reflection, which has been professionally, and personally demanding.

I have appreciated the encouragement, wisdom and commitment of Dr Gillian White who has worked with me as a thesis supervisor. A very special thankyou for your guidance, sensitivity and insight.

Appreciation is extended to the faculty of the School of Health Sciences, Massey University for providing a supportive and stimulating environment.

I am privileged to have Evana, my partner who has provided the space and support for me to complete this project.

I would like to acknowledge the financial assistance of the Australian Sexual Health Nurses Association, SmithKline Beecham Award and the New Zealand Nurses Education Research Fund.

Key to Interview Terms and Abbreviations

The following conventions used are presented here to assist the reader in their interpretation.

Name	The personal names of research participants have been changed and pseudonyms used for identification.
Number	The number of the interview and line of the transcript.
(...)	Material which has been edited.
...	Incomplete sentences without editing.
“ ”	Single words, or short phrases/ sentences used by the interviewee.
‘ ’	Words developed by the researcher or other authors.
[ ]	Insertion of additional material to make context and/or meaning clear.
Client	The term client has been used throughout this study.
STDs / STIs	The abbreviations for sexually transmitted diseases and sexually transmitted infections are used. A sexually transmissible infection is the medically correct terminology, however the former term has more common colloquial usage.
VD	The term venereal disease was the terminology formerly used to refer to sexually transmitted infections.

CONTENT

ABSTRACT	ii
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	iv
CHAPTER
1. INTRODUCTION AND OVERVIEW	1
Background	4
The contemporary role of the sexual health nurse	5
Defining sexual health and sexuality	6
Historical context	11
Sociopolitical context	22
Significance of the study	26
Aim of the study	27
Structure of the thesis	27
2. REVIEW OF THE LITERATURE	29
Studies of clients' views of sexual health services	30
Nurses' values, attitudes and beliefs about sexuality	31
Sexuality education for nurses	35
Perspectives on changing sexual behaviours	40
Concepts of marginalisation, diversity and difference	43
Social issues in the management of sexual health care	48
The somological approach	54
Summary	55

3. RESEARCH METHODOLOGY	57
Paradigms of inquiry for nursing research	58
A background of symbolic interactionism	59
The evolution of Grounded Theory	61
The methodology of Grounded Theory	63
The utilisation of Grounded Theory for the study of sexual health nursing care	63
The design and method of the present study	65
The study setting	65
Entry into the field	65
Participant selection	66
Procedures in which the research participants were involved	67
Procedures for handling information	67
The participants	68
Ethical concerns	68
Researcher involvement	70
Data collection methods	71
Data analysis	72
Establishing research rigour	78
Summary	80
4. DESTIGMATISATION	82
Destigmatisation	84
Understanding stigmatisation	87
The stigmatisation of sexual health	102
Summary	111
5. IDENTIFYING WITH PEOPLE	112
Getting into marginalised social networks	114
Creating open and accepting environments	126
Making services safe	132

Summary	139
6. PERSONALISATION	140
Getting close to people	141
Making it a positive experience	150
Finding the right empathic approach	154
Minimising threats and fears	160
Summary	167
7. RESPECTING AND DIGNIFYING	168
Treating people with care	170
Treating people with respect	174
Treating people with dignity	178
Restoring self worth	181
Summary	184
8. ADVOCATING AND EMPOWERING	185
Working in the context of sociocultural realities	187
Teaching survival skills	199
Reframing stigmatising experiences	204
Rebuilding futures	206
Summary	214
9. DOING DEVIANT WORK	215
Being identified as different	217
Experiencing professional marginalisation	223
Speaking out	226
Summary	233

10. DISCUSSION OF FINDINGS	234
The process of destigmatisation	235
Discussion of the theoretical framework	236
Integration of findings with the literature	240
Limitations of the study	249
Implications for practice	250
Implications for education	252
Implications for research	253
Concluding statement	254

APPENDICES

1. Letter to Managers of Sexual Health Services	257
2. Letter of Introduction to Prospective Participants	259
3. Information for Participants	260
4. Consent to Participate in Research Project	263
5. Confidentiality Agreement	264
6. Letter to Participants	265
7. Interview Guide, First Interviews	267
8. Interview Guide, Second Interviews	268
9. Interview Probes	270
10. Glossary of Maori Terms	272

REFERENCES	273
-------------------	------------

List of Figures

Figure One	The Process of Destigmatisation	83
Figure Two	Identifying with People	113
Figure Three	Personalisation	141
Figure Four	Respecting and Dignifying	169
Figure Five	Advocacy and Empowerment	186
Figure Six	Doing Deviant Work	218