

Copyright is owned by the Author of the thesis. Permission is given for a copy to be downloaded by an individual for the purpose of research and private study only. The thesis may not be reproduced elsewhere without the permission of the Author.

Hokianga Native Schools, 1871-1900:
Assimilation Reconsidered

A thesis presented in partial fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of Master of Arts in History at Massey University

Simon M. Duffy

2002

Contents

Acknowledgements	ii
Map one: Charles Irvine's Map of the Hokianga	iii
Map two: Hokianga Schools	iv
Introduction	1
1. Hokianga Context	5
The River	5
Accessibility and isolation	6
Schools at the centre of Maori communities	10
The kainga	12
Politics	14
2. Attendance and Control	18
A site of conflict?	18
Personal versus bureaucratic authority	19
Contested control and the department's limitations	30
Maori strategies of control: Waitapu	35
Attendance and control: Whakarapa and Lower Waihou	38
3. Changing Sources of Authority	46
Native Schools as political activism	46
Native Schools and the pursuit of mana	49
Native Schools and contested authority: Whakarapa and Lower Waihou	54
Native Schools and contested authority: The Dog Tax incident	58
4. Assimilation and Extinctionism	67
A language of power?	67
Assimilation and development	68
Extinctionism	70
Extinctionism and the Hokianga schools	74
Triumphalism and Maori acceptance of European medicine	78
Observation and tangihanga	88
Conclusion	95
Bibliography	98
Appendix 1: Sources available on Hokianga Native Schools
Appendix 2: Inspection results for selected schools
Appendix 3: Hokianga schools timeline
Appendix 4: Inspection schedule

Acknowledgements

To the Hokianga Historical Society, aka Alexia and Owen Whaley, for your kindness and resources – do that 'von' thing Alexia. To Harvey, Wendy and the others at National Archives Auckland, for patience and efficiency. To Jaqi and Joe Brown and Uncle Pusai, for hospitality and perspective. To Derek Tuiloma, Virginia Morning and Christine Wood, for encouragement and advice. To Peter Lineham for endless enthusiasm and a bottomless cappuccino maker, and to Edward Dickinson for inspiration. To the Black Caps for keeping me awake, and to my family, for being my family, and for rummaging through booksales. And to my Louise, for making me laugh, and making me believe I could do it.

Charles Irvine's map of the Hokianga harbour showing the locations of Motuti, Lower Waihou, Whakarapa, and Waitapu Native Schools, and travelling times between them. Drawn 1886

