ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I wish to thank the staffs of the following institutions for their assistance during the writing of this thesis: Massey University Library, Alexander Turnbull Library, Wairarapa Times Age, Masterton, and National Archives. It is unfortunate that the staff of National Archives is forced to work with such poor facilities. Their ready assistance is particularly appreciated, therefore, because of these difficulties.

My thanks goes to those who have taken an interest in this topic and who have provided criticisms and materials. I appreciate the criticisms and advice of my fellow members of the 1972 History M.A. class at Massey University and the staff of the Department of History there. Mr H.D.M. Chan has been very helpful both while I was researching and writing up my findings and I am grateful to him and Mr C.J. Rowe for their efforts at proof reading. My supervisor, Professor W.H. Oliver, has been most generous with his time and I appreciate his ready approachability while this work was in progress.

Full credit goes to Mrs Maureen Macdonald for the typing of the final copy.
