Copyright is owned by the Author of the thesis. Permission is given for a copy to be downloaded by an individual for the purpose of research and private study only. The thesis may not be reproduced elsewhere without the permission of the Author.
DECORATING AN INADEQUATE LANDSCAPE

Illustrating the acclimatisation of introduced bird species through wallpaper design.

Ami Rogers - Master of Design Thesis - 2015
DECORATING AN INADEQUATE LANDSCAPE

Ami Rogers - Master of Design Thesis - 2015

An exegesis presented in partial fulfilment of the requirements for the Degree of Master of Design, College of Creative Arts, Massey University, Wellington, New Zealand
New Zealand has the second highest number of introduced bird species of any country (Troup, 2015). This is the result of acclimatisation societies introducing northern hemisphere birds to provide early settlers with European familiarity, ease those afflicted with homesickness and ‘enrich’ the foreign landscape. Using archival research from the Nelson region, this project employs wallpaper pattern design to exhibit illustrations as a visual display of findings from the period of early introduced passerine bird acclimatisation. The design work functions as a metaphor for the ‘decoration’ of what was deemed an ‘inadequate landscape’, and a visual interpretation of written records from one chapter in New Zealand’s history.
Figure 1.
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This project would not have been possible without the outstanding support of my supervisors, Caroline Campbell and Natalie McLeod. Thank you both for providing your patience, knowledge and critique to this thesis, it would not have been possible without you.

Secondly I would like to acknowledge the organisations and people who have given me access to resources and research. This includes Helen Pannett at the Nelson Provincial Museum research facility, the staff at the Te Papa archives, the Alexander Turnbull Library and the Nelson Elma Turner Library.

I could not have completed this thesis without the encouragement and understanding from my friends; Emma Bramley, Jason Hablous and Rhianna Field. And finally, thank you to my parents. You have always been supportive throughout my academic endeavours, I thank for your love and inspiration during this thesis.
Contents

Introduction 13
A Brief History 16
Nelson 17
Metaphor as Visual Language 30
Decorative Theory 32
Wallpaper: A Decorative Art 34
William Morris: Case study analysis 39
Timorous Beasties: Case study analysis 42
Ben Masters: Case study analysis 46
The Design Process 50
Conclusion 68
References 70
Bibliography 72
Illustration List 74